Undergraduate Training Program for Human Resource Management

1. Major Introduction

The Department of Human Resource Management is a national first-class professional construction site, a provincial-level characteristic major in Henan Province, a school level comprehensive reform major, and a school level excellence plan project construction unit. Its predecessor can be traced back to the establishment of the "Labor Economic Management" specialty at Zhengzhou Aviation Industry Management College in 1984, which was approved by the Ministry of Aviation Industry. In May 1999, the teaching staff was reorganized based on the original major of labor economics and management, and began to recruit undergraduate students in human resources management. It became one of the earliest 36 universities in China to offer undergraduate majors in human resources management at that time. In 2008, it was rated as a provincial-level characteristic professional construction unit by the Henan Provincial Department of Education. In 2014, we began to recruit master's students in the field of human resource management. In 2019, it was approved as one of the first national first-class professional construction sites. After more than a decade of development, this major aims to cultivate a new type of composite talent with strategic thinking who can engage in human resource management practice, teaching, research and other work in enterprises, institutions and scientific research units. This major not only offers basic courses in management, economics, psychology, etc., but also teaches students methods and skills in strategic human resource management, meeting the needs of various organizational human resource management work from both theoretical and practical perspectives.
